Hi Breean,

As in my voicemail to you, I talked with our R10 Web Team about housing Ecology's 401 certification on our website. Because this is slightly different from other EPA NPDES permits and Ecology is doing the public notice for the 401 certification (as opposed to EPA incorporating the 401 cert public notice process with our public notice on the draft NPDES permit), EPA thought it would make more sense to the public if Ecology were to public notice this on Ecology's own website. You could include EPA's draft fact sheet and draft permit with the draft 401 cert.

That would be our preference if you were able to do that quickly, such as by later this week. If that's going to hold things up, then EPA could house the web link and work with Ecology so that you got comments. We would want to include specific language on our website that this was a public notice on Ecology's draft 401 cert by Ecology, it is not a public notice on EPA's draft fact sheet and permit, and that comments on Ecology's draft 401 cert are being directed to Ecology.

Thanks,
Jenny

Hi Erin,

Per my voicemail yesterday, I'm in search of a web location to house Ecology's 401 water quality certification as it relates to EPA's draft NPDES permit for the Leavenworth National Fish Hatchery.

Is it a possibility for EPA to house a web link directly below EPA's web link for the draft NPDES permit on EPA's website? We would likely embed a link in our (Ecology's) draft 401 water quality certification so comments would go directly to Ecology.

Let me know what you think...

Thank you,
